ANOTHER STRIKE.

The Modest Demands Made by the School

Boys of Frog's Corners. But the climax came one morning scholars out on a strike. They had assembled on the "green" in front of the school house, and uttered derisive cheers as he trantically rang the bell for school to "come in." Then he tried persuasion, aftewards threatssaid he would send for the "Trustees" -but none of these means availing, he wisely concluded to await events. Finally, after consultation, a deputation of boys advanced somewhat gradually to the school house door, where they were confronted by the amazed and irate master, who demanded to know the cause of this mutinous and threatening demonstration.

A big boy who headed the delegation spoke up and said:

"We've struck, and that's all there is about it. We have got grievances and we've resolved that this 'ere school shall tie up until they're right-

Then he presented the following list of reforms demanded, which he said must be acceded to or the strike would be indefinitely continued:
